Attention Getter	How will you use visuals to SHOW this?
This is where you write your script! The word for word message either you or a voiceover artist will use to communicate to the audience. In this first section, outline how you will capture the attention of your ideal client/customer. Will you use a question? A big claim? Will you call out specifically to your viewer? Will you capture them with humor? The choice is yours! Just make sure to do something BIG here :)	This is where you write out, organize, and brainstorm visual ideas! How will you communicate this part of your script to your viewer through visual representation? The more creative you can be the better. Remember, we don't want to blend in... We want to stand out! If you plan to use stock footage, outline what type of shot you're going to want to find for this section. The more detailed you are, the easier your shooting process will be :)
Identify The Gap	How will you use visuals to SHOW this?
What is the problem that your product/service or offer solves in your audience's life? The clearer you can represent that here, the better! Remember, the more relatable your "gap" is, the more you will resonate. How can you creatively outline this gap to your viewer. Paint to them, exactly where they are now, and where they want to be.	Helping your potential customer visualize exactly what it is that they are struggling with will help you drive your point and capture their focus like a laser. Think about the pest control commercial. SHOWING the bugs is much more powerful than simply talking about them. What can you visually do here to "open your viewers eyes" Be creative!

How Your Offer Bridges The Gap?	How will you use visuals to SHOW this?
Now that you've clearly outlined the problem, outline how your offer is the solution! The best offers in the world are those that SERIOUSLY solve problems in people's lives. The more you can push this theme the stronger your ad will be. How does your offer differ from your competitors? Why are you better?	A great way to visually represent this is through a demonstration. Show exactly how your product solves the problem. In the case of 14 day filmmaker, we choose to show footage from inside the course as a demonstration of the value we offer through the program. How can you use visuals to bring the strength of your message from an 8/10 to an 11/10? ----- If you're using humor, how can you use visuals to push that joke so it's actually funny? (think about grandma dancing in the 14 day filmmaker value video)
Call to Action	How will you use visuals to SHOW this?
Tell your viewer exactly what they need to do at this point. You can outline "the choice" to them: 1. Stay where they are now (undesirable situation) 2. Advance to their desired situation (by investing with you) Make it crystal clear what they need to do to take the next step.	Don't just tell them what to do, show them. What does it look like when someone invests with you and gets to their desired situation. If your offer helps people get healthier and build muscle - show healthy people who are super muscular. If your offer helps people get incredibly wealthy - show people dancing on their own private island ;) Whatever it may be, help them visualize what success in their eyes feels like.

Additional principles you should leverage: Social proof (testimonials/case studies), Validation & Elaboration, Humor, what's the cost of not bridging the gap, value stack, etc.
